Information

The artist moki from Berlin/Germany is going to release her forth book SHELTER published by Gingko Press. The book presents paintings on wood from 2010 - 2015. It includes a preface by Prof. Margaret Morton as well as other texts and an interview conducted by Anika Heusermann.

moki about SHELTER 2015:

In Shelter I have explored forms and variations of going into hiding, shielding, disguising or veiling yourself, including the apparent need to create a space of your own and to feel safe there. For me this bears different aspects and this is why I also wanted to break it up thematically. So I asked myself: What actually is a shelter? How far does it reach? The artist Hundertwasser once stated that human beings had three skins. They would be born into the first, the second would be their dress and the third the façade of their home. You could extend this idea by the social environment in which a human being moves about, meaning family and friends. In the images I create we see depictions of places and structures that offer refuge in a purely physical sense, such as huts or masks, covers or clothing, but also illustrations of a social shelter, one that could manifest itself through the comforting sensation of belonging to a group. You will also see body postures that offer a kind of protection and a place to stay, like huddling or curling up or even just closing one's eyes.

moki, born in 1982, graduated from the Academy of Fine Arts Hamburg in 2009 as an advanced student. She has been represented in numerous group and solo exhibitions in North America, Europe and Asia. Working with different media such as photography, installation, film and comic, moki's focus is on painting. Fields of interest are collaborations with other artists like the 'BeetoBee Collective' and 'the Instrument'. moki was a scholarship holder of Cusanuswerk, Dietze Foundation and Kampnagel. Goethe Institute invited her to do lectures, workshops and a wandering exhibition. SHELTER is her forth publication, after ASLEEP IN A FOREIGN PLACE by kiki post in 2006, HOW TO DISAPPEAR by Gingko Press in 2010 and the graphic novel WANDERING GHOST by Reprodukt in 2011.
